

Press Quotes - Yana Vlaeva | Bulgarian folklore

"With her passion for Bulgarian folk music and shining vocal prowess, Yana embodies a noteworthy allure."

- Laura Kirby at Folk in the Jar

"A voice that has the mystery of the ancient Sybils and the nymphs. Her singing is both eerie and soothing, the kind of sound I can imagine Diana the huntress goddess would use to command the respect of all the wild creatures of the forest. It reminded me of Sephardi songs, half lament, half lullaby, without instrumentation, just a pure vibration of the vocal chords that connects us with the unfathomable mystery of the Universe. It is almost like a Gregorian chant, whose harmonies and repetitions invite the mind to be calm and still, accepting the bewildering enigma of life, its beauty and its pain. All good poetry must aim to be like Yana's voice, for, ultimately, it is not the meaning of words that conveys a poem's truth, but its rhythm, its music."
